Integrating counterarguments into args.me

Philipp Rudloff June 11th, 2019

1. referee: Prof. Dr. Benno Stein
2. referee: Jun.-Prof. Dr. Florian Echtler

What is args?

- An argument search framework for studying questions revolving around computational argumentation
- A prototypical argument search engine
- Presented 2017 in “Building an Argument Search Engine for the Web”

Henning Wachsmuth, Martin Potthast, Khalid Al-Khatib, Yamen Ajjour, Jana Puschmann, Jiani Qu, Jonas Dorsch, Viorel Morari, Janek Bevendorff, and Benno Stein. Building an Argument Search Engine for the Web. In Fourth Workshop on Argument Mining (ArgMining 2017), pages 49–59, September 2017. Association for Computational Linguistics.

What is an argument?

- A claim and a set of premises which either support or attack the claim

What is a counterargument?

- An argument countering another argument:
  - it either denies the other argument's claim
  - or it attacks the relationship between the other argument's claim and its supporting premises

Ice is slippery because pressure lowers the ice's melting point so it becomes water.

supporting premise

Goals

- Integrate counterarguments into the args framework and search engine based on “Retrieval of the Best Counterargument without Prior Topic Knowledge”

Henning Wachsmuth, Shahbaz Syed, and Benno Stein. Retrieval of the Best Counterargument without Prior Topic Knowledge. In 56th Annual Meeting of the Association for Computational Linguistics (ACL 2018), pages 241–251, July 2018. Association for Computational Linguistics.

- Improve args.me’s layout
- Perform a user study on the new prototype(s) for args.me

Web service prerequisites

Looking into the development process of a Webis service

Web service prerequisites

- High fluctuation of participants working on software in the Webis group
- Results:
  - Wide variety of used tools and programming languages
  - Increased difficulty in project maintenance
  - Higher barrier of entry for new researchers and developers
- Reaction: Standardize the development process

Project structure

- A Webis service is concerned with many things
- Various services share similarities in structure
- Separate concerns by splitting the service into well-defined components
- Expectations:
  - Reduce risk of breaking unrelated aspects of a service when changing another
  - Less interference when working multiple teams work on the same service
  - Potential for re-using common components

Project structure

Webis service

Project structure

Technologies

- Greatest common denominator approach
- Improve maintainability and learnability by using fundamental technologies
- Code produced for this thesis uses standard HTML, CSS, and JavaScript

Use cases & features

Use cases

- Give reason for new features
- Are there scenarios with requirements that exceed args' current capabilities?

Use case scenarios

- Look at argumentation from the perspective of different categories:
Researching, convincing, opinion-forming, decision-making
- Example scenario: Convincing
  - In order to convince someone of a different opinion, presenting counterarguments seems essential

Argument:

Gravity doesn't affect light because gravity is based on mass and light has no mass.

Counterargument:

Gravity affects light because gravity is based on energy and momentum which light has.

Features

- Argument search
  - The core of an argument search engine
  - Exploration of a shallow argument space
- Argument-counterargument relation
  - A useful addition to tasks revolving around argumentation
  - Exploration of the argument space in a more meaningful way

Searching in args' argument space

Exploring argument-counterargument relations

Searching in args' argument space

Prototypes

Prototypes

- The initial state of args.me and apparent issues with its usability were documented
- In total, five prototypes were developed with these goals:
  - Implement the previously defined new features
  - Solve the documented layout and accessibility issues

The initial state of args.me

- Args.me allows its users to search for arguments by entering a free-text query
- The argument search results are displayed in a pro vs. con view:
A two-column view with two lists of arguments according to their stance
- Additionally, the results can be viewed in a topic space visualization

Yamen Ajjour, Henning Wachsmuth, Dora Kiesel, Patrick Riehmann, Fan Fan, Giuliano Castiglia, Rosemary Adejoh, Bernd Fröhlich, and Benno Stein. Visualization of the Topic Space of Argument Search Results in args.me. In 2018 Conference on Empirical Methods in Natural Language Processing (EMNLP 2018) – System Demonstrations, pages 60–65, November 2018. Association for Computational Linguistics.

Layout issues

- The argument search results page does not have a responsive layout
- On small to medium-sized screens, content overflows the viewport on both axis

The screenshot shows the args.me search results page for the query 'feminism'. The page layout is not responsive, with content overflowing the viewport on both axes. The search bar at the top shows 'feminism' with a search icon and a right arrow. Below the search bar, the page indicates 'Page 1 of 659 arguments, 335 pro, 324 con (retrieved in 1099.3ms)' and 'Pro vs. Con View | Topic Space View'. The results are organized into two columns: 'Pro' and 'Con'. Each column contains a list of arguments with their titles, URLs, and scores. The 'Pro' column has three arguments, and the 'Con' column has three arguments. The arguments are: 'Feminism Has NO gender. I am a Man And I am A...', 'Feminism is definitely something that there needs...', and 'Many women are against feminism because they like...' in the 'Pro' column; and 'Do American women still need feminism?', 'Feminism says they want the equality but', and 'Women don't need feminism. They are hiq' in the 'Con' column. The page footer includes links for 'Help', 'Terms', 'Privacy', 'API', 'About', and '© 2018 Webs'.

- One-column layout as the new default view for argument search results
- Counterargument previews were added to the first result

The screenshot shows the args.me website interface. At the top, there is a search bar with the text 'feminism' and a magnifying glass icon. To the left of the search bar is the args.me logo, which consists of a stylized 'a' with a red and green circular element. Below the search bar, the text 'Arguments 1–10 of 659 (335 pro, 324 contra; retrieved in 813.6ms)' is displayed. To the right of this text are two links: 'Traditional view' and 'Topic space view'. The first search result is titled 'Feminism Has NO gender. I am a Man And I am A...' and is marked as 'pro' with a green box. Below the title, the source is listed as 'debate.org/debates/Feminism./1/' with a score. The main text of the result discusses the definition of feminism and its role. Below the main text is a 'Show more' button. Underneath the main result, there is a section titled 'Counterarguments' which contains four preview cards. Each card has a title and a short paragraph of text.

Prototype 5: Demo

Achieved goals

- Integrated counterarguments into args.me
- Made args.me's layout responsive
- Reviewed some aspects of args.me with the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines 2.1 (w3.org/TR/WCAG21)
- Proposed a foundation for streamlining the development process within the Webis group

Future work

- Improve counterarguments integration
  - Allow access to full counterarguments directly on an argument search results page
- Explore integration of related claims
  - When entering a query, args matches its with claim on the index
  - Args could then present related conclusions

Thank you for your time
